

EDITORIAL CRITERIA

Use 12-point type for the main text and 10-point type for footnotes.

ALWAYS use small capitals for roman numerals (e.g. vol. v, Louis xvi).

HYPHENS AND DASHES

Hyphens are used either for conjunction or division: when they join, there are no spaces (x-y); when separate, they are preceded and followed by a space (x - y).

Cases of conjunction:

Michel-Charles; Paul Badura-Skoda.

D-Bds; S-Skma.

Juli-August; May-June.

5-7 June; 1721-1726.

pp. 121-128.

B-dur.

Basel-Kassel; Leiden-New York.

Cases of division:

Croll, Gerhard - Heartz, Daniel (two authors of the same volume);

Landes- und Hochschulbibliothek.

The dash is used either to set off part of a sentence (as an alternative to parentheses) or after a publication date when publication has not been completed: Stuttgart-Weimar, Metzler, 1994—.

FOOTNOTE NUMBERS

Footnote numbers in the text always precede the punctuation:

Tartini's works²¹. or «[...] Tartini's works²¹».

In the notes at the bottom of the page the numbers must be set as superior figures, the type size must be the same as that of the text and the number must be followed by a space:

²¹ See MOLINA, etc.

QUOTATIONS

Quotations run into the text are given between guillemets « » and not in italics:

La «corte ove si facevano le commedie», oltre a confermare le parole di Velasco [...]

Longer quotations (of over five lines) must be set off from the text as extracts and indented from the left in size 10. Quotation marks and italics are not used:

Tale caratteristica suggerisce a Gianandrea Gavazzeni una riflessione: dato [...] il carattere precipuo e personale di queste composizioni sarebbe più chiaro [...] definirle, piuttosto che ... ecc.
